

Lido Beach Condos Restoration

Long Island, NY

The Challenge

Historical building located in a prominent neighborhood in Long Island, NY. The building remained fully occupied during construction. The integrity of the architectural elements had to be preserved. Textures colors and details needed to blend in with the rest of the building. Once the skin restoration was completed, the building regained its original beauty. 21st century advancements in construction methods met early 20th century architectural language.

The Solution

The project included new EIFS areas and the application of air and moisture barrier to protect the building from the harsh climate of the Atlantic seashore.
